

Letter From the Editor

Dear friends, colleagues!

Here is the first issue of our journal in this year.

This issue is released during an unusual time, within the COVID-19 pandemic.

Most of radiologists and radiographers are working active and hard in the departments of infectious clinics made from hospitals and scientific centers.

The data acquired during the classic radiological investigation and, especially CT, allows to help patients during the early stages of the disease.

Thus, in this issue we are presenting the first general materials about the diagnostics of COVID-associated pneumonia.

We hope that these materials will help our colleagues on their work places!

Of course in this issue there are also scientific articles, clinical cases, reviews and lectures on different issues of radiology.

I wish all the colleagues and everybody, who is fighting against the pandemic, health, good mood and creative success for the benefit of our patients.

Today radiology is of special value for all clinical medicine!

I wish you all the best!

Sincerely,
Chief Editor
