

From the editor

Dear readers!

Let me present the 3rd issue of Russian Electronic Journal of Radiology. This publication is a modern project to promote and introduce new concepts, approaches, methods and researches in radiology.

The question spectrum, discussed on journal's papers, is rather miscellaneous. It will be interesting to a wide range of readership as radiologists and also the physicians, health officials, managers of medical companies, lectors and students of medical universities. However, one of the main journal features is practical orientation and great attention to fundamental and applied questions of new technologies introduction in radiology and their use in medical practice. In editorial board work world-renowned scholars – academicians, prominent professors and medical doctors.

In the 3rd issue there are original articles about different radiological directions, clinical cases, scientific review and historical aspects of domestic radiology development.

I am sure, that this journal will be useful for professional community, for the specialists and also will contribute to medical help improvement and to increase the educational level of radiologists.

Dear colleagues! We will be glad to receive your articles, reviews and interesting practical cases for consideration and publication in our journal.

Yours sincerely,
Deputy chief editor, Professor,
